

J-2 EMPLOYMENT AUTHORIZATION

Exchange Visitors who wish to bring their families with them to the United States must prove that they have sufficient funds to provide for their dependents, as well as for themselves. A J-2 dependent may be authorized to work only with permission from the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) which is part of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. The J-1 and J-2 visitor must continue to maintain status and the money earned by the J-2 dependent cannot benefit the J-1 visitor.

“Income from the spouse's or dependent's employment may be used to support the family's customary recreational and cultural activities and related travel, among other things. Employment will not be authorized if this income is needed to support the J-1 principal alien.

It is not permissible to work unless/until employment authorization is granted. Those with J-2 status who are granted employment permission will have Social Security and income taxes deducted from any earnings” 8 CFR 214.2(j)(1)(v)(A)

J-2 dependents with employment authorization may work full or part-time, and according to USCIS regulations, may engage in any kind of employment, but are not authorized to practice medicine. J-2 dependents must also adhere to all other applicable exchange visitor regulations.

Application Procedures

A J-2 who wishes to work should write a letter to the USCIS requesting employment authorization. While financial need is not a criterion, the reason for requesting authorization should be fully explained. The letter should itemize the total income and expenses of the family and state for what purpose the income will be used. It is important to explain that any money earned will not be used toward the support of the J-1 visitor.

Issuance of Employment Document

If and when employment is authorized, the J-2 will be sent an Employment Authorization Document (EAD). No employment is permitted unless/until authorization is granted or renewed by the USCIS. The applicant cannot begin working until the EAD card is received.

J-2 dependents can apply for their Social Security Number (SSN) on their Form I-765 or after they have the EAD card. If you apply using the I-765, it should arrive two to three weeks after your EAD card. Or, J-2 EAD cardholders can take their immigration documents and a letter or contract from the employer to the Social Security Office and apply for a SSN. More information about applying for a SSN is on the OIPS website.

Income earned by J-2s is subject to Social Security taxes as well as federal, state, and local income tax.

International Travel: OIPS strongly encourages you to not travel while your application is pending. Exiting the U.S. could result in USCIS denying your application. Please consult with your J-1 advisors about risks if you have an urgent need to travel.

J-1 Program Extensions and J-2 EAD Cards: J-1 Exchange Visitors applying for a Program Extension cannot use J-2 funds to support their program extension application that were earned using their EAD card. In addition, J-2 dependents who currently have an EAD card and want to continue employment must wait for the J-1 Program Extension to be approved before filing another Form I-756 to extend their employment authorization. The new Form I-765 should be submitted as soon as possible, but no more than 180 days in advance to assist in having the new authorization be approved before the current one expires. If the current authorization expires, the J-2 must not work until the new authorization is received.
